The global market for electronic components is complex and non-transparent, but also offers companies opportunities and new possibilities. Our team of experts with 20 years of experience in the industry has built a global, reliable supplier network from which our customers benefit. We explore the market for you, select the best possible price and thus offer you a competitive advantage in the procurement of original products from any well-known manufacturer. Due to our fair pricing, excellent product knowledge and technical expertise, we can guarantee you the best possible service in one of the most globally non-transparent markets.

We can support you in the strategic planning of your procurement and help you to cover your long-term needs of electronic components. In order to serve your short-term needs, we can access a large number of stocks worldwide and procure for you discontinued components and allocation products at fair prices so you can avoid acute shortages in your production.

INELDIS is an independent distributor, therefore we have the possibility to offer you original products of all manufacturers and are not bound by trade restrictions. We are not subject to pricing rules and benefit from unrestricted access to the global market.

Our team of experts is able to secure preferential prices for procurement of electronic components through its long-standing worldwide network of contract distributors and manufacturers. Ask for a free and non-binding offer and convince yourself of our strengths.
